Centre for Asia Pacific Aviation Launches Free Online Air Fare Database for 1,500 City Pairs Worldwide

(SYDNEY, 24-March 2011) - The Centre for Asia Pacific Aviation (CAPA), www.centreforaviation.com, announced today it has launched a new free service that provides an interactive online database of economy, business and first class fares covering 1,500 of the world's busiest city pairs. CAPA has signed an agreement with ITA Software, a leading provider of innovative solutions to the travel industry, to receive the city pair fares data on a daily basis.

CAPA's new database can be found at <http://www.centreforaviation.com/profiles/airports/> select the airport of your choice and look at the fares tab.

"The fares data give fascinating insights into airline pricing and competitive trends in key markets and will be a very useful tool for aviation professionals and consumers." said Peter Harbison, CAPA's Executive Chairman.

"We are pleased to provide CAPA with data for their most important city pairs, and commend them for providing this service to the aviation industry" said David Peller, regional vice president, EMEA and India, ITA Software.

The fares database is a key feature of the relaunched CAPA Airport Profiles. These profiles cover over 3,000 airports worldwide, also featuring:

- Comprehensive schedules data and analysis – updated weekly;
- Traffic, financial, technical data and corporate statistics.

The announcement builds on CAPA's recent inclusion of live fleet and schedule data for some 2,500 airlines from internationally renowned industry sources as well as live traffic data for over 100 listed and unlisted carriers and comprehensive US airline quarterly financial data sourced from the DoT Form 41.
